

The Hurricane

Fannie's neighbourhood was destroyed by a hurricane. If Fannie had known about the dangers, she would have left the city. If the government had warned the citizens, then many people wouldn't have been trapped in their houses by floodwaters. If the government had listened to the warnings of environmentalists, the city could have taken more precautions. If there had been better planning, the damage wouldn't have been so severe. If Fannie had been warned she could have gathered emergency supplies of food and water. If the government had provided buses and transportation then everyone could have evacuated the area.

Ryan's Crazy Class Trip

Today Ryan woke up late for school. If Ryan had remembered that today was a class trip, he would have arrived on time. If Ryan hadn't been late, his classmates wouldn't have been annoyed at him. If he had remembered they were visiting a farm, he wouldn't have worn his best clothes. If he had known they were going horseback riding, he would have worn his cowboy hat. If Ryan hadn't tried doing cowboy tricks on the horse, he wouldn't have ended up face first in the mud. Also, if he had stayed away from the cows as he was told, he wouldn't have been chased around by an angry herd. After lunch the class went berry picking. If he had listened to the warning about poisonous berries, Ryan wouldn't have spent the afternoon in the hospital. But if Ryan had behaved himself all day, he wouldn't have had so many funny stories to tell his parents when he got home.
