

My Experience of Learning English

Based on my several working experience, I always addressed that be exposed to English in everyday's life is essential key to learn efficiently.

This insistence comes from my life-experience of learning English who never had interest in learning new language and became a person who works at English based working surrounding.

My first experience of learning English was not successful and as to that I lost my interest and motivation as a young learner. Even though I was taught by several native speakers and their teaching skills were quite old styles, concentrating only audio-lingual method or grammar translation method using few tools such as text book or simple hand-out.

With a result of old-style of learning, I lost my interest rapidly and I struggled my English lesson time with boredom.

There was a dramatic change to overcome my learning English experience as I decided to transfer my middle school at Pennsylvania, U.S.A.

First of all, along with cultural shock, I had to spend much more time to study English to catch up school subject as a middle school student.

But I learned language much more outside of the classroom, because I was living USA, language was not only a subject but survival tools which I had to learn quickly as possible. During communicating between all different situations with different people, I was exposed to various situations, and my language learning system developed to certain level in short amount of time.

In other hand I can say it is much more efficient to learn English as a communicational background such as various field experiences.

To achieve proficiency level of English I passed certain period of time just to focus on developing English by thought different method of teaching at Towson University Language School Program.

At this period of time I involved in every class as an active student and every class was pretty much designed as student centered with qualified enabler teachers. In this environment students can achieve substantial development.

As to look back my experience of learning English, I have strong confidence that learning English as the best is that have a learner exposed to well designed educational surrounding contain all different teaching method with appropriate amount of teaching
