Are You a Picky Eater?

I don't think I am a particularly picky eater. Compared to some of my friends, I am very adventurous eater. I like eating all kinds of foods, and I love trying new flavors. But there are a few tastes that I just don't like. For example, when I visited Korea, I tried Sun-dae, but the taste was not to my liking. But everything else that I ate during my trip was absolutely delicious. The foods give me the most energy are the food that my mom cooks. For me, my mom is the best cook.

Whenever I feel tired or stressed, eating a meal that my mom cooks with love always makes me feel better. However, since I'm now a student living away from home, I can't always have a home-cooked meal when I feel sad.

So, at those items, a simple but tasty meal is my go-to dinner. Even with minimal effort, it is possible to eat a healthy and satisfying meal which makes you feel happy I also enjoy trying to cook new recipes. I like the challenge of trying to cook food from lots of different countries, and when it runs out well, I gain a log of energy and happiness when I eat the delicious meal that I cooked.

During the winter, I like foods such as stews cause the warmth you feel after eating is very comforting. However, in the summer, refreshing food is the best. During a hot day, cool and refreshing food boosts my energy. These days, I try to eat fruit whenever I need more energy in the middle of the day, because it's healthy. But every so often, I find that a sweet treat like cake is the perfect food to give me that bit more energy.
